A despatch from Trenton, N. J., the home of the corporations, announces the defeat of Senator Dryden yesterday to succeed himself as United States senator. As Senator Dryden owned nearly everything in New Jersey, including the honor of most of the members of former legislatures, the caucus nomination of Frank O. Briggs, equivalent to an election, shows that in the East at least, the disposition to unseat the men who stand for managing the people's business in the interests of predatory corporations is growing. Colorado may elect Guggenheim and Kansas her Curtis but the square dealer everywhere will take comfort in knowing that the Prudential Life Insurance Company is no longer making laws for the nation. Now let "Me Too" Platt and Chauncey M. Depew with his hundred and sixty five pairs of breeches be eliminated, and we will look to the East for political inspiration.

The country is now being informed that Harry Kendall Thaw has a highly nervous nature and it will be proven to the satisfaction of slayer and the Thaw family that he was under a spell of temporary emotional insanity when he shot his victim. These steps are none other than were expected and in fact were the only available course. The appeal to the unwritten law was out of the question, as Shaw is stated to have a sufficient number of transgressions of this kind to his discredit as to make the probable action of the jury too uncertain to be risked. A man's life is a precious thing who can command as many dollars as can this creature; the scriptural law, "Who sheds man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed," was never made for such high-priced young killers as the latest exploiters of the reputation of our Puritan colony of millionaires.

A Royal Slave

The performance given by the Royal Slave Company at the McAninch Theatre last night was far above the average of plays that we have seen in Anadarko. The company carries special scenery, and the customing and stage setting were brilliant and striking. The parts were well and strongly played, although half the company was stated to be under the care of physicians because of colds that cannot be properly attended to.

This company is a deserving one, and has announced a return date in the near future. Those theater-goers who braved the refrigerated atmosphere of the playhouse feel well satisfied with the performance although many heels were beating a shivery tattoo at the end of the last act. Mr. McAninch gives the best shows here that are available and Anadarko is a good show town but the people will not crowd cold playhouses, and in justice to the public as well as to the performing companies, the management should see that a comfortable degree of warmth is maintained in auditorium.
Last night was unusually cold, however, and the ordinary means of heating proved insufficient. The Democrat would be glad to announce a warm house when the next show comes off.

NO NEED TO PAY TOLL.

Ramshackle Rig Would Not Fit Any Description.

In the days of toll bridges the keeper of one over one of the western Massachusetts rivers was a rather sly old character named Abercrombie. It is said that one day an outfit of the most ramshackle appearance drove up to the gate—horse a mere travelling bone-yard, harness held together with various bits of rope and string, and numerous deficiencies in the wagon made good evidently by any old bit of wood that could be utilized.

"Drive on, drat you! drive on!"

The driver, corresponding to this outfit in point of general dilapidation, stood with mouth agape conning the schedule of rates, when old Abercrombie stepped out of his little house and said: "Drive on, drat you! Drive on! There's nothin' thar answers to your description."

RAMSHACKLE OLD DOVE-COT.

Building Dating From 1307 Still in Good State of Preservation.

The "Dove-cot" at Hurley, near Marlow, Bucks, England, is an ancient and picturesque building, dating from the year 1307. The picture shows the interior. The jambs and lintel of the pigeon-house doorway are of more modern date than the walls. On the front of the lintel the date 1642 with C. R. to follow is distinctly marked. It was used by the old monks for the purpose of breeding pigeons, and the countless niches or nests of chalk (of which material the walls are made) are very remarkable.

The ladder shown is fixed to a central beam, and when inspecting the nests it is only necessary, when standing on the ladder, to push against the wall and the whole affair moves round. It is still the home of a very considerable number of pigeons.
